SB (Undead), 2017, oli and silicone on canvas, 30 x 80 cm

Opere Scelte Gallery has the pleasure of inviting you, on Thursday 21 September 2017 at 6.00 pm, in via Matteo Pescatore 11/D to the opening of the exhibition Simulated Landscapes by Sven Drühl, curated by Emanuela Romano.

Sven Drühl investigates and re-elaborates Modern and Contemporary Art History's landscapes and architectural designs. In his paintings and in the works with neon lights he alludes to already existing artworks by other artists such as Caspar David Friedrich, Ferdinand Hodler or by fellow contemporary artists.

He works on the landscape in a nonconventional way, employing silicone and latex in addition to traditional materials, giving three-dimensionality to the canvas. During the last decade he intensely worked following the Japanese New Print Movement, known as Shin Hanga, which originated during the 1910s in Japan. In this last series of works he undertakes a new artistic method inspired by virtuality and videogames textures, reproducing landscapes which look like they are entirely real.

As it happens with textures in computer graphics, in his artworks the artist follows a mathematical structure; the composition is well organized and the pattern repetition is cyclic. The canvas follow a clear strictness and his technique creates more detailed and realistic landscapes by working on lines and shading. The expression and the signs of the lines make sense when hit by light because they come alive and the individual details, from simple quotes, produce new landscapes.

The exhibition will be open until Saturday 21 October 2017.
